Nicole Marmanillo is an associate with Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, LLP in its litigation group. Marmanillo's practice focuses on complex insurance defense litigation, including transportation law, bus company liability, trucking law, motor vehicle negligence, labor law and premise liability.

Campolo, Middleton & McCormick is a true modern and innovative law firm, Marmanillo said. "It offers part-time schedules, 'summer hours' and the option to work from home, all in an effort to help its employees maintain a healthy work/life balance," she said. "The partners continue to encourage us, drive us and invest heavily in our training not only as attorneys but as business women. They see us as future leaders."

It is no secret that balancing a career with the everyday stress and demands of being a mother is not an easy task, Marmanillo said.

"After having my second child two years ago I started my own business so that I could achieve that balance more easily," she said. "So when Scott Middleton asked me to join his firm, one would have expected me to decline. When I expressed to him my concerns about being a full-time associate and a mother, what followed was a lengthy and incredibly honest discussion about his expectations, the firm's - and mine."

"I wish that every working mother in the world could have a discussion with their boss or prospective boss like the one I had with Scott before I happily accepted his offer," she said.

I feel incredibly proud and lucky to be a part of this team and I hope that Campolo, Middleton & McCormick will be a role model to other law firms and businesses in their vision for young females who are mothers or are likely to become mothers," Marmanillo said.

Prior to joining Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, Marmanillo worked for Travelers Insurance Company and gained valuable insurance defense experience. She also practiced employment discrimination law at one of Long Island's most prominent firms and worked for a private insurance defense firm, where she represented individuals as well as large institutional clients in personal injury matters.

Marmanillo earned a bachelor's degree from Rutgers University. She completed her undergraduate degree with a double major in political science and German. She was one of 15 students nationwide to be awarded a fellowship by the Bosch Foundation to teach English at the Technical University of Dresden in Germany. Following her one-year fellowship abroad, she attended law school at Touro Law Center where she earned a juris doctor - graduating cum laude, with honors in legal writing and oral argument. While pursuing her juris doctor, Marmanillo was also the secretary for the Student Bar Association and a Teacher's Assistant for Criminal Law.

She is admitted to practice in New York and New Jersey and is a member of the New York State Bar Association and the Suffolk County Bar Association.

Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, LLP is a full-service law firm with the expertise and experience to represent clients in a wide variety of legal matters, including litigation and appeals, insurance, corporate and private equity, technology and intellectual property, government relations, employment, real estate, healthcare and bankruptcy law. The firm has an established record of results for its clients, who range from individuals to global companies, and approach each matter with a unique understanding of the issues and the highest level of integrity. The firm is the recipient of the HIA-LI Business Achievement Award and our attorneys are consistently included in the LIBN "Who's Who" of Long Island. The firm strives to be trusted counselors and advisors and prides itself on the long-term relationships it forges with its clients.
