WHO'S WHO | in Labor Law

ARTHUR YERMASH, ESQ.

*Campolo, Middleton
& McCormick, LLP*

Arthur Yermash is an associate at Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, LLP's labor and employment law group. Yermash's practice includes providing a wide range of labor and employment-related legal services. He is versed in advising clients on issues surrounding collective bargaining, severance, restrictive covenants, restructuring, employment contracts, and employee incentive programs.

Clients also turn to Yermash for assistance with workplace safety issues, as well as guidance on state and federal employment laws, including matters such as wrongful termination, wage and hour, trade secrets, management training, as well as worker's compensation, unemployment and disability insurance compliance.

In labor related matters, it takes both a good personal connection with the client along with an understanding of the ever-changing labor laws to be an effective counselor, Yermash said.

"In order to achieve this, I approach every client with an understanding that they have unique needs," he said. "Every matter is different, and I make sure that I spend the appropriate time to fully understand the facts and circumstances before coming up with a legal strategy. Once we have a strategy in place, I make sure that the client has full awareness of what to expect in the process, and then seek to exceed those expectations every chance I have."

Yermash earned a bachelor's degree, magna cum laude, in finance and investments from Baruch College, CUNY. While at Baruch, Yermash was a member and graduate of the inaugural class of the Macaulay Honors College. Additionally, he spent a semester abroad at Colegio de Espana in Salamanca, Spain. He then attended Touro Law Center where he was a Faculty Fellow and a Merit Scholarship recipient. While at Touro Law Center, Yermash was a judicial intern for Magistrate Judge Arlene R. Lindsay (EDNY), a teaching assistant all first year law classes, and a research representative for Westlaw.

Yermash is admitted to the New York State Bar. He is a member of the New York State Bar Association, the Suffolk Bar Association and the Touro Law Center Alumni Council and Alumni Association.
