Arthur Yermash is an associate at Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, LLP and is a member of its corporate, technology, and employment law groups. Yermash's practice focuses on corporate transactions, mergers and acquisitions, not-for-profits, employment matters and products and service agreements.

The practice of corporate law has drastically changed over the last few years, Yermash said.

"Our corporate law practice has adapted to be more efficient and competitive in the global market," he said. "One of our key focuses has been to stay on the forefront of cutting edge legal technology. We implemented sophisticated document management system with complex search capabilities to allow us to be more efficient in managing and tracking internal documents. More recently, we expanded our technological capabilities by implementing a secure cloud-based document storage and communications platform to facilitate seamless communication and exchange of documentation with our clients and adversaries."

In addition to making investments in new technology, the firm has also invested human capital, Yermash noted.

"We've sought out and hired knowledgeable personnel in an effort to improve internal and external communication and workflow so that we better serve our clients," he said. "Additionally, our firm expanded attorney and staff education programs by having lunch and learn programs and other educational initiatives."

"Most importantly, our firm focuses understanding the needs of our clients so that we not only meet those needs but work tirelessly to exceed them," Yermash said.

Yermash earned a bachelor's degree in finance and investments, magna cum laude, from Baruch College, CUNY. While completing his undergraduate degree, he was a member and graduate of the inaugural class of the Macaulay Honors College. Additionally, he spent a semester abroad at Colegio de Espana in Salamanca, Spain. He then went on to pursue his law degree at Touro Law Center, where he was a Faculty Fellow, a Merit Scholarship recipient, a judicial intern for Magistrate Judge Arlene R. Lindsay (EDNY), and a teaching assistant all first year law classes.
