Eryn Deblois is an attorney at Campolo, Middleton & McCormick, LLP in Bohemia.

Deblois graduated from the University of California, Davis and the Seattle University School of Law, with a focus on intellectual property and litigation. She has experience in litigating complex commercial, intellectual property and tort matters. Her practice consists of litigating complex business, intellectual property, real estate and debtor/creditor matters.

The most pressing challenge facing the firm, which is facing all businesses, has been the downturn in the economy, Deblois said.

"With the current economic recession, both existing and new clients have become more cost-sensitive," she said.

"While our firm has experienced an increase in the number of clients requiring legal services, our solutions must be conscientious to their economic reality. At the offset, litigants are paying careful consideration to legal costs and expenses, along with their legal opportunities and risks. As a result, we have been working closely with clients to devise efficient, yet effective litigation strategies."

This has also enabled the firm to devise creative solutions to resolve disputes, without resorting to lengthy and costly litigation, Deblois noted.

"Settlement discussions are initiated earlier in some cases, and are considered throughout the litigation," she said. "The increased emphasis on efficiencies and keeping client costs down has pushed us to devise creative legal strategies tailored to the individual client."

Deblois is admitted to practice in the states of New York and Washington and is part of Campolo, Middleton & McCormick's litigation group. In Washington, she was a member of the Intellectual Property Practice Group, Washington Defense Trial Lawyers Association, and the Trial Advocacy Program Committee.
